Heyy guys, how are you doing?

I just came back from a five day trip to London. Our whole class went there and it was a lot of fun. At first we had to get up very early in the morning to catch our flight, (4 a.m) so I didn't even go to sleep. After the journey we arrived at our hostel at one o'clock and started a paperchase in which we had to answer a lot of questions and also take some selfies at some sights. After that we met the rest of the class at the Hard Rock Cafe, which didn't serve very good burgers which were also expensive. But the location was very nice and I took a lot of pictures.

On the next day we went to one of my personal highlights of the whole week. Guess what, aaand yes it is the spooky London Dungeon. It is a very realistic horror show in which you have to walk about two hours and get scared by some real people who work there. To be honest, sometimes I was really scared . I also had some shocks from some jump-scares in the show. But I would really recommend it to everyone who likes to get scared or who likes horror.

Another thing I also liked very much was to visit the famous detective museum at 221b Bakerstreet. Some of you might already know who I am talking about. Yes, it's Sherlock Holmes and as you all know, I love the TV show Sherlock and I also read some of the books. It was a really interesting experience to be at this place which looks very similar to the one in the show.

And now my friends, drum roll. My absolute favourite thing I did in London was to visit Kings Cross's „Platform 9 ¾“. Unfortunately there isn't a real Platform 9 ¾ but they added a sign and half a trolley into the wall next to a big and expensive, especially for my wallet because I wanted to buy literally everything, Harry Potter Shop. I went there two times because we had no time to take some pictures the first time so I had to visit it twice. Twice as bad for my wallet but twice as good for my little fanboy heart 😊. I waited about an hour to finally take a picture with my girlfriend at the trolley doing some cool poses and I took a second hour to look at all the nice stuff they sell at the store. In the end I bought a wand after a lengthy talk with an employee. I bought the wand of Sirius Black and as the name says the wand is also black and looks really cool, in my opinion.

Of course, we did a lot more than that like visiting the Sky Garden, some museums or went on a Jack the Ripper tour. I am sure I will return to London to visit the Universal Studios and the M&M's world but for now I can only dream about it because school starts again and I'm gonna need to study. 😞

Have you guys ever visited London before ? Which places would you recommend to visit? And most importantly, which wand would you take?

Write it in the comments, I'm gonna meet you there!

Best regards,

Daniel
